In this part of 'Never Let Me Go' by Kazuo Ishiguro, the storyteller, Cathy, describes the trouble her friend, Tommy, had when he was younger. They were both at an unusual school where the pupils always lived, never visiting or knowing their parents.

1 Tommy and I talked about all this not so long ago, and his own account of how his 2 troubles began confirmed what I was thinking that night. According to him, it had 3 all started one afternoon in one of Miss Geraldine's art classes. Until that day, 4 Tommy told me, he'd always quite enjoyed painting. But then that day in Miss 5 Geraldine's class, Tommy had done this particular watercolour – of an elephant 6 standing in some tall grass – and that was what started it all off. He'd done it, he 7 claimed, as a kind of joke. I quizzed him a lot on this point and I suspect the truth
8 was that it was like a lot of things at that age: you don't have any clear reason, you 9 just do it.

10 Anyway, he did his elephant, which was exactly the sort of picture a kid three 11 years younger might have done. It took him no more than twenty minutes and it got 12 a laugh, sure enough, though not quite the sort he'd expected. Even so, it might 13 not have led to anything if Miss Geraldine hadn't been taking the class that day.

14 Miss Geraldine was everyone's favourite guardian when we were that age. She 15 was gentle, soft-spoken, and always comforted you when you needed it, even 16 when you'd done something bad, or been told off by another guardian. If she ever 17 had to tell you off herself, then for days afterwards she'd give you lots of extra 18 attention, like she owed you something. It was unlucky for Tommy that it was Miss 19 Geraldine taking art that day and not, say, Mr Robert or Miss Emily herself – the 20 head guardian – who often took art. Had it been either of those two, Tommy would 21 have got a bit of a telling off, he could have done his smirk, and the worst the others 22 would have thought was that it was a feeble joke. He might even have had some 23 students think him a right clown. But Miss Geraldine being Miss Geraldine, it didn't 24 go that way. Instead, she did her best to look at the picture with kindness and 25 understanding. And probably guessing Tommy was in danger of getting stick from 26 the others, she went too far the other way, actually finding things to praise, pointing 27 them out to the class. That was how the resentment started.

28 “After we left the room,” Tommy remembered, “that’s when I first heard them 29 talking. And they didn’t care I could hear.”

30 My guess is that from some time before he did that elephant, Tommy had had 31 the feeling he wasn’t keeping up – that his painting in particular was like that of 32 students much younger than him – and he’d been covering up the best he could 33 by doing deliberately childish pictures. But after the elephant painting, the whole 34 thing had been brought into the open, and now everyone was watching to see what 35 he did next. It seems he did make an effort for a while, but he’d no sooner have 36 started on something, there’d be sneers and giggles all around him. In fact, the 37 harder he tried, the more laughable his efforts turned out. So before long Tommy 38 had gone back to his original defence, producing work that seemed deliberately 39 childish, work that said he couldn’t care less. From there, the thing had got deeper 40 and deeper.

41 For a while he’d only had to suffer during art lessons – though that was often 42 enough, because we did a lot of art in the Juniors. But then it grew bigger. He got 43 left out of games, boys refused to sit next to him at dinner, or pretended not to hear 44 if he said anything in his dorm after lights-out. At first it wasn’t so relentless. Months 45 could go by without incident, he’d think the whole thing was behind him, then 46 something he did – or one of his enemies, like Arthur H. – would get it all going 47 again.

48 I’m not sure when the big temper tantrums started. My own memory of it is that 49 Tommy was always known for his temper, even in the Infants, but he claimed to me 50 they only began after the teasing got bad.
